A Family Chroniele, by the author of "The Helr of Redelyne," "Heartsease," &c. Two volumes, 12mo. Paper covers, 51; cloth, 51 50.

THE PLAN OF THE AUTHOR IN WAITING THIS SERIES OF BOOKS.

Throughout these tales the plan has been to present a picture of ordinary life with its small adily events, its pleasures, and its triaks, so as to draw out its capabilities of being turned to the best account. Great events, such as befall only a few, are thus excluded; and in the hope of helping to present a clue, by an example, to the persisties of daily life, the niches that have been sacrificed, and the attempt has been made to make the interest of the book depend on character-painting.

Extract from a Review of "The Heir of Redelyth" and denit which render story exciting have been sacriticed, and the which render story exciting have been sacriticed, and depend on character-painting to make the interest of the book depend on character-painting to make the interest of the book depend on character-painting to the first of the writings which made a sensation here was the "Heir;" and what a sensation here was the "Heir;" and what a sensation it was! Referring to the remains of the tear-washed covers of the copy aforesaid, we find it belonged to the "eighth thousand." How many thousands have been issued since by its publishers, to supply the demand for new, and the places of drowned, dissolved or swept away old copies, we do not aftermpt to conjecture. Not individuals merely, but homebolds consisting in great part of tender hearted young damses, were plunged into mourning. With a tolerable acquaintance with fictibious heroes, not to speak of real ones, from Sir Charles Grandison down to the nursery idol, Carlton, we have little hestiation in pronouncing Sir Guy Merville, of Redelyiffe, Baronet, the most admirable one that we ever met with, in story or out. The glorious, joyous boy, the brilliant, ardent, chivalrous child of genius and overshadowed with the darkness of his early death—what a caution is there! What a vision!
